

The Lovers' Cinquain

By Elinor Goehring

My lips stood chapped from bitter cold

Until my handsome love did scold them through his kiss—

an endless bliss—

My lips ran smooth by his lips' hold